ECTA, the European Chemical Transport Association, has made its Drivers APP available as a native download for iOS and Android devices. The app was launched last year in a web-based format, to allow drivers to rate their daily experiences at loading and unloading sites at chemical facilities across Europe. Following positive feedback, ECTA has now updated and adapted the app and made it available from the app stores.

ECTA says some big players in the chemical industry have agreed to promote the Drivers APP and are now providing posters and information material at their sites. This is helping to identify areas where work conditions for drivers can be improved, to help the industry deal with the driver shortage.
